Forward

This is the seventh in the biennial series of Citizen's Guides to Michigan Campaign Finance. The Citizen's Guide is a data book that is designed to be a quick reference on Michigan political campaigns and the principal donors to officeholders, officeholders' PACs and the political parties. The emphasis is on state campaigns, as opposed to federal, because there are excellent online resources available about federal campaigns, but no other comprehensive information products about Michigan state campaigns.

Since the Supreme Court of the United States published its opinion in Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, there has been increased public attention on political spending that cannot be traced to its sources. The reader is advised to bear in mind that unaccountable spending in Michigan state campaigns is proportionally much greater than it is in federal campaigns, and such spending in Michigan state campaigns predates Citizens United by a decade. Since 2000, the Michigan Campaign Finance Network has compiled records of more than $88 million in candidate-focused television ads that were not reported to the Michigan Bureau of Elections. Such unreported spending has become a major feature of every hotly contested Michigan state election.

We hope this Citizen's Guide will help you to better understand political and policy processes in Michigan, and that it will enable you to be more effective in exercising your civic responsibility of government oversight.

Federal Overview

The 2012 federal election was largely a status quo election. President Barack Obama won reelection, although his popular vote and Electoral College margins were narrower than 2008. In 2008, Obama won the popular vote, 69.5 million to 59.9 million, over Sen. John McCain, and the electoral vote, 365 to 173. In 2012, Obama won the popular vote over Mitt Romney, 65.9 million to 60.9 million, and the electoral vote, 332 to 206.

Despite Democrats winning a plurality of the 2012 nationwide popular vote for the U.S. House of Representatives, 59.54 million to 57.97 million, Republicans won a 234 to 201 majority of seats. This disparity in votes and representation is attributable to a concentration of Democratic voters in urban areas, and technically effective partisan redistricting in a number of states, including Michigan.

Democrats picked up two seats from Republicans in the U.S. Senate in the 2012 election. Democrats won 53 seats, Republicans won 45, and two independents, Bernie Sanders of Vermont and Angus King of Maine, caucus with the Democrats.

Presidential fundraising was down by 21.4 percent from 2008, $1.42 billion compared to $1.81 billion, mainly due to the fact that President Obama was not opposed for the Democratic nomination in 2012. Fundraising by Republican presidential candidates was down by 4.7 percent compared to 2008, from $656.3 million to $625.4 million.

Fundraising by Democratic candidates for the U.S. House was off by 5.9 percent from 2010 totals, $485.8 million compared to $516 million. Meanwhile, House Republican candidates increased their fundraising by 8.4 percent, from $567.8 million to $615.7 million.

Overall fundraising by U.S. Senate candidates was down by 6 percent in 2012, from $723.8 million in 2010 to $680.8 million. Democratic candidates were down by 2 percent to $303.6 million. Republicans were down by 9 percent to $377.2 million.

Independent spending by national party committees was up by just 2.9 percent compared to 2004, and down by 10.6 percent compared to 2008, at $255.3 million.

Independent spending by the National Republican Congressional Committee topped the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee in 2012, $64.7 million to $60.5 million. At the same time, independent spending by the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee topped that of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, $52.8 million to $32.1 million. The Republican National Committee reported independent spending of $43.6 million in 2012. The Democratic National Committee reported no independent spending.

The area that was not status quo in 2012 was independent spending by nonparty committees. In the first presidential cycle since the full liberation of corporate independent spending in the 2010 Citizens United decision, nonparty independent spending more than triple compared to 2008 or 2010. The 2012 total, $1.04 billion, represents the total independent spending of SuperPACs, which disclose their donors, but only a fraction of the political spending by 501(c) nonprofit corporations, which do not disclose donors. Independent spending for political advertising by nonprofits does not have to be reported to the Federal Election Commission unless it falls within 30 days of a primary election, or 60 days of the general election. In Michigan, for example, just 34 percent of political television advertising by nonprofit corporations occurred within the time window when it had to be reported to the F.E.C. (see Michigan's Presidential General Election Campaign, pp. 6-7 of this report). It is certain that independent spending by political nonprofits nationally far exceeded what was reported to the F.E.C.. It is not clear how much of that spending is an acceptable use of those nonprofits' tax status.

FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION LIMITS

The limit on contributions to a federal candidate committee in the 2012 cycle was $2,500 per election for an individual. That is, $2,500 for the primary election and $2,500 for the general election. National party committees were limited to $5,000 per election; state and local party committees, combined, were limited to $5,000 per election; multi-candidate PACs were limited to $5,000 per election; federal candidate committees were allowed to give another federal candidate committee $2,000 per election.

Contributions to national party committees were limited to $30,800 per calendar year from individuals and PACs that are not multi-candidate PACs. Multi-candidate PACs were limited to $15,000 per year. State and local parties, federal candidate committees and other national party committees could contribute without limit to national party committees.

Contributions to PACs are limited to $5,000 per calendar year from any individual, party committee or other PAC.

Individuals were subject to an overall biennial contribution limit of $117,000 to candidates, PACs and party committees. No more than $46,200 could be given to candidates; no more than $70,800 to all PACs and party committees, of which no more than $46,200 could go to state and local party committees and PACs.

Individuals and corporations are free to give without limits to SuperPACs, which are limited to making independent expenditures and prohibited from giving directly to candidates.

Michigan Presidential Campaign

PRIMARY ELECTION

By the time of Michigan's February 28th presidential primary election, the field of active Republican candidates had been reduced to four: Newt Gingrich, Ron Paul, Mitt Romney and Rick Santorum. Romney won a plurality of votes, 409,522, while Santorum finished second with 377,372 votes. Paul finished a distant third with 115,911, and Gingrich received 65,027 votes. None of the other candidates on the ballot - Michelle Bachman, Herman Cain, Jon Huntsman, Gary Johnson, Fred Karger, Rick Perry or Buddy Roemer - got as many as 2,000 votes. Uncommitted votes were cast by 18,809 Republicans.

Incumbent President Barack Obama was the only Democrat on the ballot. He received 174,054 votes, and uncommitted Democrats cast 20,833 votes.

The television campaign was dominated by the contest between Romney and Santorum. Romney's campaign committee spent $1.5 million statewide, and the SuperPAC Restore Our Future spent $2.0 million in support of his candidacy. Santorum's campaign committee spent $1.0 million, while the SuperPAC supporting him, the Red, White and Blue Fund, spent $1.2 million. Ron Paul's campaign committee spent $56,000 for TV ads.

On the Democratic side, Barack Obama's campaign committee spent $529,000, while the SuperPAC supporting his candidacy, Priorities USA Action, spent $236,000.

GENERALELECTION

Democratic incumbent Barack Obama easily won Michigan's 16 electoral votes by getting 2,564,569 votes (54.2 percent), while Republican challenger Mitt Romney received 2,115,256 votes (44.7 percent). It was the sixth consecutive presidential election won by the Democratic candidate in Michigan.

Jill Stein, the Green Party candidate, was the top vote-getter among minor party candidates with 21,897 votes. She was followed by Virgil Goode, Jr. of the U.S. Taxpayers Party with 16,119. The national Libertarian Party candidate, Gary Johnson, was denied a spot on the Michigan ballot because he had run as a Republican in the primary, but he received 7,744 write-in votes. Natural Law Party candidate Ross Anderson got 5,147 votes.

The Michigan presidential television campaign was extraordinary for the fact that neither candidate's campaign committee bought an ad until the last week before Election Day, when the Obama campaign spent $648,000 in the Detroit and Grand Rapids markets. The Romney campaign never did buy television advertising after the February 28th primary.

A coordinated campaign of advertising by SuperPACs and "social welfare" nonprofit corporations maintained a steady barrage of anti-Obama ads throughout 2012. Beginning in January, but suspending activity during the window of the presidential primary, then resuming the day after the primary, the nonprofits Americans for Prosperity, American Future Fund, 60 Plus Alliance and American Energy Alliance joined the SuperPAC Restore Our Future to keep up a steady flow of negative ads about the President and his administration's policies up to Memorial Day. Those ads all were placed by the ad agency Mentzer Media.

The nonprofits' anti-Obama campaign went into hiatus for the month of June. For the month of July, the nonprofit Crossroads GPS and the SuperPAC American Crossroads carried the anti-Obama air campaign through ads placed by Crossroads Media. Restore Our Future resumed the television campaign for August through October, with intermittent breaks. Then, Americans for Prosperity, American Future Fund and 60 Plus Alliance sponsored a $3.9 million ad blitz the last week of the campaign.

All spending by the SuperPACs – Restore Our Future and American Crossroads – was reported to the Federal Election Commission, and donors to those committees were reported. Of the $11.7 million spent by the political nonprofits, only the final $3.9 million (34 percent) had to be reported to the F.E.C.. No donors to the nonprofits were disclosed.

U.S. House of Representatives – Michigan

PRIMARY ELECTIONS

There were four notable congressional primaries in Michigan in 2012:

The Democratic primary in the 3rd Congressional District for the right to challenge Republican freshman incumbent Rep. Justin Amash;

The surprise Republican primary in the 11th Congressional District to fill the seat vacated by the resignation of incumbent Rep. Thaddeus McCotter;

The five-way Democratic primary in the 13th Congressional District that featured three state legislators challenging 24-term incumbent Rep. John Conyers; and

The five-way Democratic primary in the 14th Congressional District that featured two incumbent members of Congress, Hansen Clarke and Gary Peters.

In the 3rd District Democratic primary, former state representative and judge Steve Pestka defeated Trevor Thomas, 13,414 votes to 9,321. As of the pre-primary campaign finance reports, Pestka had a wide money advantage with total receipts of $794,258, compared to $293,582 for Thomas. Pestka's advantage was attributable to self-funding of $610,987. Thomas had raised more in individual contributions, $281,510 to $169,590.

The 11th District Republican primary was thrown into an unanticipated state of chaos by the resignation of incumbent Thaddeus McCotter, after it was exposed that he had submitted falsified nominating petitions. The only Republican who had valid nominating petitions as of the filing deadline was a then unknown TEA Partier, Kerry Bentivolio. The Republican establishment of Wayne and Oakland Counties selected former legislator Nancy Cassis to oppose Bentivolio as a write-in candidate, but Bentivolio prevailed easily, 42,470 votes to 21,436.

Bentivolio was unopposed to run at the same time as the Republican candidate in the old 11th District, to complete the term from which McCotter resigned.

Cassis had more receipts at the pre-primary campaign finance filing, $288,675 to $172,641, thanks to self-funding of $200,000. Cassis also raised more in individual contributions, $57,175 to $40,050. However, independent spending of $693,000 by the SuperPAC Liberty for All, supporting Bentivolio and opposing Cassis, gave Bentivolio's campaign an overall financial advantage. Liberty for All received more than $3 million of the $3.3 million it raised in the 2012 election cycle from an Austin, Texas student named John Ramsey.

The 13th District Democratic primary was ultimately won easily by incumbent Congressman John Conyers. He received 38,371 votes out of 77,719 votes cast. State Sen. Glenn Anderson was second with 12,586 votes, followed by State Rep. Shanelle Jackson with 8,708 votes, and State Sen. Bert Johnson with 6,928.

Rep. Conyers was the leading fundraiser through the pre-primary reports. He raised $734,446. Mr. Anderson was second with $219,473, followed by Mr. Johnson with $101,610. Ms. Jackson filed no finance report.

In the 14th District Rep. Gary Peters won the primary with 41,230 votes, followed by Rep. Hansen Clarke with 30,847, and Southfield Mayor Brenda Lawrence with 11,644. Former state representative Mary Waters received 2,919 votes.

At the pre-primary campaign finance report, Mr. Peters had campaign receipts of $1,880,437. Mr. Clarke had $699,412 and Ms. Lawrence had $110,027. Americans for Tax Reform made independent expenditures of $471,498 opposing Mr. Peters in the primary period. The National Association of Realtors spent $543,000 supporting him.

GENERALELECTION

In contrast to 2010, when Michigan had the most expensive U.S. House campaign in the nation and two other hotly contested races, only one general election contest was truly competitive in 2012: The rematch in the 1st Congressional District between incumbent Republican Rep. Dan Benishek and former Democratic state legislator Gary McDowell. Mr. Benishek prevailed, 167,060 votes to 165,179.

For the election cycle, Mr. Benishek had the advantage in campaign receipts, $2,224,860 to $1,497,727. However, independent spending favored Mr. McDowell, $3,757,368 to $2,773,344. Leading independent spenders are shown in Table 5.

In the special election to complete Thaddeus McCotter's vacated term in office, David Curson defeated Kerry Bentivolio by 159,258 votes to 151,736. Mr. Bentivolio prevailed in the new 11th District over Syed Taj, 181,788 votes to 158,879. Despite a campaign committee financial advantage and supportive independent spending of $310,000 by the American Medical Association, Dr. Taj was not able to win a strongly Republican district. The Michigan Republican Party spent $83,000 in the last week of the campaign to support Mr. Bentivolio. Other notable independent spenders supporting Bentivolio included Freedom's Defense Fund ($135,270), American Future Fund ($30,000) and Freedomworks for America ($24,559).

In looking at the overall Michigan vote for the 113th Congress and its results, it is clear that the 2011 redistricting, which was entirely controlled by Republicans, had great partisan effectiveness. Republicans won 64.3 percent of the congressional delegation with just 45.6 percent of the vote. Democrats, on the other hand, won just 35.7 percent of the delegation with 50.7 percent of the vote. If combined to a single metric, "effective vote" (percent of delegation / percent of vote), Republicans had an effective vote that is twice that for Democrats, 1.41 to 0.70. The closest margin for a winning Democrat was that of Sander Levin, who won by 27.9 percent of the vote. That is another indicator of a highly successful partisan redistricting: Democrats were "packed" into a minimal number of districts that they carried by overwhelming margins.

U.S. Senate – Michigan

Michigan's 2012 U.S. Senate campaign began extremely early when former Congressman Pete Hoekstra ran a tasteless Super Bowl television ad featuring an Asian American woman affecting a pidgin English accent criticizing incumbent Sen. Debbie Stabenow as "Debbie Spend-it-now." The ad was criticized from all corners, and although Hoekstra won the Republican primary, the general election was never a competitive contest.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Pete Hoekstra won the Republican primary easily, taking 398,873 votes, compared to runner-up Clark Durant's 246,685. However, it was clear that Hoekstra was not a candidate who unified state Republicans. Two former party chairpersons, Betsy DeVos and Saul Anuzis, were among Mr. Durant's most prominent supporters.

By the pre-primary campaign finance reports, Mr. Hoekstra had campaign receipts of $3,544,587, and Mr. Durant had raised $2,242,956. Anuzis organized a SuperPAC called Prosperity for Michigan that made independent expenditures in the amount of $645,000 supporting Durant.

Two other candidates appeared on the Republican primary ballot: Gary Glenn and Randy Hekman. They were nonfactors in the race.

GENERAL ELECTION

Incumbent Sen. Debbie Stabenow raised more than $14.3 million over the six years since her last campaign in 2006. While Pete Hoekstra raised $5.8 million, he had already spent $2.4 million by the time of pre-primary campaign finance reports. Sen. Stabenow defeated Mr. Hoekstra by more than 20 percent of the vote, 2,735,826 to 1,767,386.

A boutique SuperPAC called Hardworking Americans spent more than $1 million for television ads attacking Stabenow at the end of the campaign. Macao casino magnate Sheldon Adelson, who also was a major supporter of the SuperPACs supporting Newt Gingrich and Mitt Romney, gave the committee $1 million for the effort.

State Overview

Campaign finances for Michigan's 2012 state elections were unprecedented. Committees that were involved in state elections raised more than $209 million, easily breaking the previous state record of $135 million from 2006. And while the Governor, Attorney General, Secretary of State and members of the Michigan Senate were not on the ballot in 2012, they raised another $7 million in various committees under their control, but not including their leadership PACs.

The biggest story of the year was the ballot campaigns. Six questions appeared on the November ballot. Two other initiatives failed to make the ballot. The various committees supporting or opposing the ballot questions raised $154.3 million. The previous record for fundraising by ballot committees was $31 million in 2004.

Candidates' campaign committees for the Michigan House, the various statewide education boards and the judiciary raised $32.7 million. Those campaigns also featured nearly $4 million in reported independent expenditures. Another $18 million worth of candidate-focused issue advertising was not reported through the State's campaign finance disclosure system – fully one-third of the spending in the candidate elections in 2012.

Issue advertising is not a new feature in Michigan election campaigns. Since 2000, the Michigan Campaign Finance Network has compiled records from the public files of the state's broadcasters and cable systems of more than $88 million in otherwise unaccountable spending – most of it spent by the state's major political parties. There is absolutely no accounting of the sources of that money. It is a huge blind spot in the public's consciousness of who is spending money in Michigan politics, and, consequently, who is driving the policy agenda in Michigan.

Three-fourths of spending in the 2012 Michigan Supreme Court campaign was off the books. As in other contexts, that means voters don't know the identities of the campaigns' biggest money supporters.

But in the judicial context, it also means judicial impartiality could be compromised in the event one of those major supporters has a case before the judge he, or she, propelled to election. The campaign supporter's legal opponent has no way to know if such a conflict of interest is occurring, and no way to know when a recusal motion is justified.

Unaccountable spending made its first appearance in a Michigan trial court campaign in 2012. In Oakland County's Sixth Circuit Court race, some anonymous donor(s) bought $2 million worth of television advertisements attacking one candidate and touting two others through the vehicle of two DC-based nonprofit corporations. That alone was three-fourths of the spending in that campaign for five seats on the Sixth Circuit Court. There is no way to estimate spending for similarly anonymous direct mail about the candidates that bombarded Oakland County voters.

Finally, issue advertising became a major feature in a handful of the most contentious races for the Michigan House of Representatives. In three races, unreported issue advertising exceeded $500,000. In one of those races, it topped $800,000. Just six Michigan House races had one-third of the spending for all 110 seats.

STATE CONTRIBUTION LIMITS

An individual can give a maximum of $500 to a candidate for state representative, $1,000 to a candidate for state senator and $3,400 to a statewide candidate, per election cycle. Independent political action committees (PACs) and state party committees can give ten-times that amount, with the exception that state parties can give up to $68,000 to a statewide candidate.

There are no limits on contributions to PACs and party committees. Corporations are not allowed to contribute to candidates, or committees that contribute to candidates. Corporations can contribute to SuperPACs that are limited to making independent expenditures.

Ballot Committees

Michigan ballot committees smashed all previous records for fundraising and spending in 2012. In aggregate, the 2012 ballot committees raised $154.3 million. All six proposals that were on the ballot lost at the polls on November 6th.

PROPOSAL 1

Proposal 1 was a referendum on whether to adopt the Emergency Manager Act. The proposal was supported by 47.3 percent of voters and the law was effectively repealed.

The proponent of Prop 1, Stand Up for Democracy, raised $1,995,466, 91 percent of which was contributed by American Federation of State County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) Michigan Council 25. There was no focused financial opposition to Proposal 1 after it survived a legal challenge put forth by Citizens for Fiscal Responsibility.

A modified version of the Emergency Manager Act was passed in the 2012 lame-duck legislative session and signed into law by the Governor.

PROPOSAL 2

Proposal 2 was the most expensive ballot question in 2012. Prop 2 would have guaranteed collective bargaining in the Michigan Constitution. It was supported by 42.6 percent of voters.

The main proponent of Prop 2, Protect Working Families, raised $23,660,772. Its major donors included the United Auto Workers National Civic Action Program, $3,555,763; the Michigan Education Association, $2,685,675; the AFL-CIO State Unity Fund, $1,836,561; the National Education Association, $1,500,000; UAW Solidarity House, $1,028,480; the American Federation of Teachers, $1,002,427; and the MEA's USO Crisis Fund, $1,000,000.

The direct opponent of Prop 2, Protecting Michigan Taxpayers, raised $23,175,994. Its leading donors included the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, $9,213,325; The Michigan Alliance for Business Growth, $5,540,000; Sheldon and Miriam Adelson, $2,000,000; and the DeVos family, $2,000,000.

Proposal 3 was a constitutional amendment to require 25 percent renewable energy by 2025. The proposal was supported by 37.7 percent of voters.

Proponents of Prop 3 raised a net total of $14.5 million through several committees, mainly Michigan Energy, Michigan Jobs. Leading financial supporters of Prop 3 included the Michigan League of Conservation Voters, $3,125,188; Green Tech Action Fund, $2,843,000; the national League of Conservation Voters, $2,489,007; Blue Green Alliance, $1,421,172; American Wind Energy Association, $1,062,644; and Julian H. Robertson, Jr., $1,000,000.

The opponents of Prop 3, Clean Affordable Renewable Energy (CARE) for Michigan, raised $25,281,104. Its major donors were Consumers Energy, $12,213,929; and DTE Energy, $11,892,623.

Proposal 4 was a constitutional amendment to establish a guarantee of unionized home health care workers. It was supported by 43.8 percent of voters.

The proponent of Prop 4, Citizens for Affordable Quality Home Care, raised $9,360,437. All contributions to the ballot committee ran through the 501(c)(4) corporation Home Care First, Inc. Service Employees International Union contributed $5,570,000 to the committee. Other donors are not identifiable.

There was no committee in opposition just to Prop 4. Citizens Protecting Michigan's Constitution opposed all the constitutional amendments, particularly Proposals 2, 3 and 4.

PROPOSAL 5

Proposal 5 was a constitutional amendment that would have required a legislative supermajority or a vote of the citizens to approve any state tax increase. The proposal was supported by 31.2 percent of voters.

Two committees supported Prop 5, both of which were supported mainly by the financial holdings of Ambassador Bridge owner Manuel J. Moroun. Americans for Prosperity Michigan Ballot Committee raised $1,512,703. The Detroit International Bridge Company gave that committee $1,213,014, through the Prop 6 ballot committee, People Should Decide. Americans for Prosperity contributed $299,689.

Michigan Alliance for Prosperity had $3,755,138 in support of Prop 5. Moroun's Liberty Bell Insurance Agency gave 99.6 percent of that money.

The opponents of Prop 5, Vote No on 5 - Defend Michigan Democracy, raised $2,090,546. Its top donors included: Michigan Health and Hospital Association, $410,000; National Education Association, $400,000; Michigan Municipal League, $269,000; and American Federation of Teachers, $250,000.

PROPOSAL 6

Proposal 6 was a constitutional amendment that would have required voter approval for any new international bridge or tunnel. The proposal was supported by 40.7 percent of voters.

The proponent committee, The People Should Decide, raised $33,541,060, almost entirely from M.J. Moroun's Detroit International Bridge Company. Moroun's Central Transport chipped in $100,000 of in-kind support.

Opponents to Prop 6 raised $1,719,350 through the committee Taxpayers Against Monopolies. Its top donors included: Fund for Michigan Jobs, $565,000; General Motors, $500,000; and DTE Energy Corporation, $250,000.

The Detroit International Bridge Company spent more than $9 million for television advertising opposing a new Detroit-Windsor bridge in the 18 months prior to establishing its ballot committees.

MULTI-TASKING COMMITTEES

Citizens Protecting Michigan's Constitution opposed all five constitutional amendments, particularly, Proposals 2, 3 and 4. The committee raised $8,675,491. Its top donors were the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, $1,982,811; the Michigan Republican Party Administrative Account, $1,500,000; the Prop 2 opponent, Protecting Michigan Taxpayers, $941,000; the Michigan Chamber's ballot PAC, $900,000; and the Michigan Health and Hospital Association, $750,000.

Michigan League of Responsible Voters opposed Proposals 1 and 5, and supported Proposals 2, 3 and 4. It raised $875,744, and its donors were the National Education Association, $585,000; the UAW, $100,744; SEIU, $100,000; and the MEA, $90,000.

PROPOSALS THAT FAILED TO MAKE THE NOVEMBER BALLOT

A proposal to expand casino gaming was denied certification for the ballot. The proponent committee, Citizens for More Michigan Jobs, raised $3,466,500. Partners in the limited liability company contributed the cash.

Two committees sponsored by existing casino owners opposed the expansion proposal. Protect MI Vote raised $1,949,680, and Protect MI Constitution raised $555,858.

Finally, a proposal for a constitutional amendment to require "corporate accountability" was withdrawn almost as soon as it was announced. Right to Know Committee raised $73,452. The Michigan Democratic Party contributed $69,500 of that amount.

CONTEXT: WHAT OTHER PROPOSALS COST

The extraordinary scale of the 2012 ballot proposal campaigns is clear when they are compared to others of the recent past. Here are some examples:

- Michigan's 2008 Stem Cell campaign cost a total of $16.3 million; $9.7 million in support, $6.6 million in opposition.
- The 2008 Medical Marijuana campaign cost $2.3 million; $2 million in support, $309,000 in opposition.

- The 2006 ban of Affirmative Action cost $6.7 million; $4.9 million in support, $1.66 million in opposition.
- The 2004 Casino proposal cost $27.6 million; $19.7 million in support, $6.9 million in opposition.
- The 2004 ban of Marriage Equality cost $2.7 million; $1.8 million in support, $901,000 in opposition.

Top contributors to the 2012 ballot committees are shown in Appendix B.

Michigan House of Representatives

The 2011-2012 Michigan House campaigns were the most expensive ever. The candidates on the November 6th ballot raised $16.3 million. Reported independent expenditures for the general election totaled $1.7 million. Unreported candidate-focused issue advertising by the state parties was $2.3 million. That is a total of $20.3 million. The previous high for money in a House general election was $19.3 million in 2008.

If spending for the November 2011 recall election in the 51st District ($920,000), the 2012 special elections to fill vacated seats in the 29th and 51st Districts ($423,000) and the money raised and spent by and for primary candidates who did not make the November general election ($2.7 million) is included, overall spending came to $24.35 million. The previous comparable high total was $21.8 million in 2008.

It is no secret that most districts are drawn to be safe for one party or the other, and the greatest amount of spending is in those few districts that are judged by both parties to be winnable. Still, the concentration of spending for a small number of seats in 2012 was remarkable. The six most expensive races totaled $7,675,000. That is 38 percent of what was spent in the general election for all 110 districts. In those six races, the state parties and the respective caucus PACs provided 59 percent of what was spent.

Money remained a good predictor of electoral success in 2012. Ninety-two percent of winners had greater financial support than their opponent(s). The nine candidates who defeated a candidate with superior financial backing were Theresa Abed (D-71st Dist.), Winnie Brinks (D-76th Dist.), Cindy Denby (R-47th Dist.), Scott Dianda (D-110th Dist.), Ray Franz (R-101st Incumbency also continued to have a strong correlation with electoral success in 2012. Eight-two of 87 incumbents won in November (94.3 percent). Five other incumbents lost primaries, four of whom were Democrats who were pitted against a fellow Democratic incumbent in reconfigured districts created by the 2011 redistricting.

Education Boards

Democrats won a clean sweep in 2012 of the eight seats on statewide education boards. Michelle Fecteau and Lupe Ramos-Montigny won seats on the State Board of Education. Mark Bernstein and Shauna Ryder Diggs won seats on the University of Michigan Board of Regents. Incumbent Joel Ferguson and Brian Mosallam won seats on the Michigan State University Board of Trustees. Sandra O'Brien and Kim Trent won seats on the Wayne State University Board of Governors

This was the fourth consecutive election where one party swept all eight education seats. Democrats were the winners in 2006 and 2008; Republicans won in 2010. In each of the last four elections, the winners of the education board seats were of the same party as the winner at the top of the ticket: Jennifer Granholm in 2006, Barack Obama in 2008, Rick Snyder in 2010 and Barack Obama, again, in 2012.

Probably more than any other offices, electoral success for these positions seems to be decoupled from the advantages that normally accrue to incumbency and financial advantage. Given the generally low profile of these campaigns and normally low visibility of the candidates, it is believed by most observers that these offices are the ones where voters express their underlying party preference, free of any inclination to split a ballot for the sake of an appealing candidate outside the voter's normal partisan voting pattern. Political analysts generally assess underlying party preference of voters within smaller political jurisdictions as some weighted average of votes for these education boards.

Michigan Senate

The 38 members of the Michigan Senate raised $3.1 million from the time their 2010 post-election reports were filed in November 2010, through December 31, 2012. They also spent $2,317,458 from their campaign accounts for fundraisers, paying off debt and expenses incidental to holding office.

The chamber's eight term-limited members raised $533,848. Sen. Roger Kahn, who is term-limited, raised more than any other member, $245,135. Kahn spent $189,004.

Top contributors to individual senators' campaign committees are listed in Appendix F.

Constitutional Executives/ 527 Committees

Michigan's top constitutional executives - Gov. Rick Snyder, Secretary of State Ruth Johnson and Attorney General Bill Schuette - all are eligible to run for their current offices again in 2014. All have been raising funds for their candidate campaign committees, and each has been raising funds for a 527 committee. Governor Snyder also has a 501(c)(4) nonprofit "social welfare" corporation, and an active leadership PAC.

As of December 31, 2012, the Governor had raised $755,530 for his candidate committee. Consistent with his 2010 campaign, the committee has accepted funds only from individual contributors and eschewed PAC contributions. His candidate committee still owes more than $5 million to Mr. Snyder from the 2010 campaign. The Governor's Club, his 527 committee, had raised $588,695, as of December 31, 2012, and its donors are mainly corporations and associations.

Mr. Snyder's 501(c)(4) committee, New Energy to Reinvent and Diversify (NERD), sets him apart from his predecessors. The committee raised $1,318,100 and spent $865,830 in its first year of operation, beginning 35 days after the Governor took office. Its 2012 tax return had not been filed, as of June 1, 2013. The committee does not report its donors. Its mission is to lessen the burdens of government and promote social welfare.

Secretary of State Ruth Johnson raised $211,451 for her candidate committee and $69,406 for her 527 administrative account during 2011-2012.

Attorney General Bill Schuette raised $557,692 for his candidate committee and $333,690 for his 527 administrative account.

Top donors to the constitutional executives' campaign committees and 527 committees are shown in Appendices G and H, respectively.

Political Parties' State Accounts

Reporting by Michigan's state political parties is unlike reporting by any other committee. The parties are not required to file any summary of their campaign finance activity. They merely file long lists of receipts and expenditures.

What the parties file reveals vastly different modes of operation. The Michigan Republican Party gets 94 percent of its reported contributions from individuals. The Michigan Democratic State Central Committee gets half its contributions from interest groups' PACs, with substantial additional amounts coming from candidate committees, the legislative caucuses' PACs and individuals. On the expenditure side, the public record shows that the MDSCC spent twice as much as the MRP in the 2012 cycle.

The parties are more alike than different in the spending each does that is not reported to the Michigan Bureau of Elections. Records collected by MCFN from the public files of Michigan television broadcasters and cable systems show that each party spent more than $6 million for TV ads about the suitability for office of the 2012 Michigan Supreme Court candidates. Neither party reported any of it. The MDSCC spent $1.9 million for ads about Michigan House candidates and the MRP spent $436,000 for ads about House candidates, and neither reported any of that. has collected 13 different direct mail pieces from the Michigan Republican Party about 2012 Supreme Court candidates, and just two of those were paid for by regulated (reported) funds. All in all, both parties spent more in 2012 for campaign ads they didn't report, than for the total of spending that they did report. And when they don't report the spending, they don't report the contributions that paid for that spending.

The Michigan Department of State interprets that vast amount of unreported spending by the state political parties as voter education, not campaign expenditures. This absolves the parties of any requirement to report the spending or the enabling contributions. In so doing, the Michigan Department of State is aiding and abetting deception against the citizens of the state of Michigan on a massive scale. This is not a matter of favoring one party over the other. This is a scandalous accommodation of anonymity for some of the most important funders of Michigan politics, at the expense of voters' right to know who is driving the politics of this state. This blight on Michigan's public life is addressed elsewhere in this Citizen's Guide in the essay, "End the Issue Ad Deception."

Top contributors to the state political parties, at least the ones that are reported, are shown in Appendix I.

Political Action Committees

Michigan's top 150 political action committees (PACs) raised $39.7 million in the 2012 election cycle. That figure is down by 18.1 percent compared to the 2010 cycle, when the top 150 state PACs raised $48.5 million. That difference is very similar to the amount raised in 2010 by the Republican Governors Association (RGA) Michigan State PAC, an enterprise that was a subsidiary of the $113 million RGA 527 committee. The RGA Michigan PAC dissolved after the 2010 cycle.

Comporting with long-term norms, the legislative caucus PACs were the biggest state PACs. The House Republican Campaign Committee was the biggest, at $2,885,005, up by 77 percent compared to the 2010 cycle. The House Democratic Fund was second, at $2,288,676, but it was down by 40 percent compared to the 2010 cycle. The Senate Republican Campaign Committee was third, $1,632,965, and the House Democratic Fund was 17th at $534,238.

Speaker of the House Jase Bolger and Senate Majority Leader Randy Richardville finished in a dead heat for the largest leadership PAC with both raising more than $497,000. Gov. Rick Snyder's One Tough NERD PAC was third among leadership PACs with $234,456.

The great difference among PACs in the 2012 cycle was the emergence of state SuperPACs. A few associations dabbled in the 2010 cycle, led by the Michigan Association of Realtors SuperPAC. In the 2012 cycle there were 11 SuperPACs among the top 150 state PACs. The union-funded Working for Michigan SuperPAC was the largest, at $905,000, followed by Business Leaders for Michigan

SuperPAC, $796,250, and Parents and Teachers Putting Students First SuperPAC, $604,427.

There is a range of transparency among the SuperPACs. Working for Michigan and Business Leaders for Michigan reported their various donors in straightforward fashion. The Realtors SuperPAC, reported that it received the majority of its funds from the Realtors Issue Mobilization Fund, an internal account for aggregating funds. This bookkeeping technique has the effect of concealing the identities of donors. For the second consecutive cycle the Realtors SuperPAC bought more than $400,000 worth of radio advertisements supporting the Republican nominees for the Michigan Supreme Court.

Officeholders' leadership PACs are listed in Appendix J, and top contributors to the largest leadership accounts are shown in Appendix K. Top contributors to the Legislative caucuses' PACs are in Appendix L.

Michigan Supreme Court

In the race for two full terms on the Michigan Supreme Court, Bridget McCormack was the top vote getter, followed by incumbent Justice Stephen Markman. Incumbent Justice Brian Zahra won the right to complete the partial term to which he had been appointed upon the resignation of former Justice Maura Corrigan in January 2011.

The 2012 Supreme Court campaign was the most expensive and least transparent in history. The major-party nominees for the court raised $3,382,048 in their campaign committees. The political parties and various political action committees reported independent expenditures of $1,617,884. Candidate-focused issue advertising that was not reported to the Bureau of Elections, most of which was sponsored by the state Republican and Democratic Parties, totaled $13.85 million. The Michigan Campaign Finance Network compiled records of the undisclosed television spending from the public files of state broadcasters and cable systems.

The candidates' share of campaign spending, 17.9 percent, was a record low. The unreported spending for television advertisements, 73.5 percent, was a record high. And there certainly was additional spending that was not reported. MCFN has collected 13 different direct mail pieces about the candidates that were paid for by the Michigan Republican Party. Only two of the 13 were paid for with regulated (reported) funds.

The practice of high volume, unreported television advertising about Michigan Supreme Court candidates has been a regular feature of campaigns since 2000. Since that time reported spending has totaled $26.6 million, while unreported television advertising has totaled $34.7 million. Just 43 percent of all Supreme Court campaign spending has been reported since 2000.

Undisclosed spending in Supreme Court campaigns thwarts the voter's right to know who is supporting the candidates, as it does in any campaign where undisclosed spending occurs. However, there is additional toxicity to unreported spending in a judicial campaign. It compromises trust and confidence in the impartiality of the judiciary. If a person or interest group spends a very large amount to help elect a judge, and the judge who benefited from that support hears a case involving his or her supporter, the supporter's opponent in litigation is justified in asking the judge to stand aside from the case. But if the support was undisclosed and can't be found in the public record, the party whose right to an impartial court hearing has been compromised can't know when such a recusal motion is warranted. The probability of bias is there, but knowledge of it is not.

This situation is perpetuated by an interpretation of the Michigan Campaign Finance Act by the Michigan Department of State that says that only communications that have words of "express advocacy" must be considered to be campaign expenditures and, thus, subject to mandatory disclosure. In light of U.S. Supreme Court campaign finance jurisprudence of the last six years, that interpretation is ripe for reconsideration and revision.

Federal Election Commission v. Wisconsin Right to Life (2007) was the important first step to undo the ban on corporate political spending in the weeks immediately preceding a federal election. The decision also provided a working definition for authentic issue advocacy: An attempt to mobilize viewers or listeners to contact a public official to act on a matter of policy. In the words of WRTL's counsel, James Bopp, issue advocacy is "grassroots lobbying."

This definition makes clear that the idea of issue advertising in a judicial campaign is a complete misapplication of a concept. The State of Michigan publishes a list of lobbyable officials, and no judges are on that list. The only place for advocacy with a judge is the courtroom. Television advertisements about judges are the functional equivalent of express advocacy, an effort to define the candidates' suitability to hold office, so the viewer will know how to cast his, or her, vote.

Caperton v. Massey Coal Company (2009) established that judges must not participate in cases involving their major campaign financial supporters. This reinforces the requirement for transparency. It should be unacceptable to have a probability of bias in any case that cannot be detected.

And finally, Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission (2010) made a strong statement in support of transparency as to the sources of all campaign spending. Part IV of the court's opinion said, "The First Amendment protects political speech; and disclosure permits citizens and shareholders to react to the speech of corporate entities in a proper way. This transparency enables the electorate to make informed decisions and give proper weight to different speakers and messages."

The secret financing of Michigan Supreme Court campaigns is a national disgrace. The citizens of Michigan deserve much better.

Court of Appeals

There were twelve seats on the Michigan Court of Appeals on the November 2012 ballot. The twelve judges who occupied those seats prior to the election all ran unopposed. This was the second consecutive election for the Court of Appeals in which the only candidates were the incumbents. No incumbent Michigan Court of Appeals judge has ever lost an election.

The judges standing for election were:

- First District: Judges Kirsten Frank Kelley and Michael Riordan;
- Second District: Judges Elizabeth Gleicher, Kathleen Jansen and Deborah Servitto
- Third District: Judges Jane Beckering, William Murphy, Douglas Shapiro and Mark Boonstra (partial term)
- Fourth District: Judges Stephen Borello, Peter O'Connell and Amy Ronayne Krause (partial term)

Ten of the judges filed for campaign finance waivers, indicating that they would raise and spend less than $1,000. Judge Beckering raised $600 and Judge Krause raised $41,320 ($25,500 self-funded), but both ceased fundraising once the filing deadline passed and it was clear they would have no electoral opponent.

Circuit, District and Probate Courts

There were 221 trial court seats up for election in 2012: 71 for Circuit Court, 69 for District Court and 81 for Probate Court. Overall, 70 seats (31.7 percent) were contested, and the candidates raised $8,424,809 in campaigns for the contested seats.

Forty of 188 incumbents (21.3 percent) faced a contested election, although that statistic overstates the extent of the challenge to incumbents. Most notably, 16 incumbents running for Wayne County's 3rd Circuit Court faced just one challenger, who was not successful. Just two incumbents lost their election: Sam Salamey defeated incumbent Judge Richard Wygonik in Wayne County's 19th District, and Nancy Thane defeated incumbent Judge Amanda Roggenback for the seat on the Tuscola County Probate Court.

The most expensive trial court campaign, by far, was the contest in Oakland County's 6th Circuit. Five incumbents, Judges Leo Bowman, Phyllis McMillen, Denise Langford Morris, Wendy Potts and Michael Warren, faced two challengers, Deborah Carley and William Rollstin, in the contest to fill five seats. The incumbents each raised at least $100,000 in cash plus a minimum of $11,000 in-kind support. Rollstin raised just $11,180 in cash plus $34,642 in-kind, while Carley raised $36,875 in cash and $37,851 in-kind. All five incumbents retained their seats.

The remarkable feature of the 6th Circuit campaign was the presence of $2 million in unreported television issue advertising, sponsored by two DC-based nonprofit corporations, Judicial Crisis Network and Americans for Job Security. The Judicial Crisis Network ads touted the "Rollstin-Carley plan for the court," while Americans for Job Security sponsored attack ads directed at Judge McMillin. Reportedly, there was also voluminous direct mail sponsored by the nonprofits, but there is no way to estimate the amount of that spending. Such unaccountable spending has long been a part of Supreme Court campaigns, but it is new to have this anonymous spending in a trial court campaign.

The most expensive district court seat was in Oakland County's 46th District, where Debra Nance defeated William Seikaly for an open seat in the general election. Nance raised $82,345 ($59,104 self-funded), while Seikaly raised $136,318 ($100,472 self-funded). Five other candidates who lost in the August primary raised a total of $77,169.

The most expensive probate court campaign was in Monroe County, where incumbent Judge Frank Arnold defeated Jill LaVoy for the right to complete the term to which he had been appointed in 2010.

Judge Arnold raised $124,822 ($76,124 self-funded). Ms. LaVoy raised $107,931 ($76,355 self-funded). Two candidates who lost in the August primary raised an additional $49,794.

End the Issue Ad Deception

Since 2000 Michigan's most hotly contested election campaigns have included millions of dollars' worth of candidate-focused television advertising that is not reported to the Michigan Bureau of Elections, the State's official campaign finance disclosure system. By collecting data directly from the state's broadcasters and cable systems, the Michigan Campaign Finance Network has been able to document more than $88 million of such advertising about candidates for governor, attorney general, secretary of state, justice of the Supreme Court, state representative and, in 2012, judge of the Oakland County Sixth Circuit Court.

This spending goes unreported because the Michigan Department of State considers it to be issue advertising, not campaign advertising. Even though most of this spending was sponsored by the state's major political parties, and most of the ads are biting negative in an effort to define candidates' suitability to hold office, the Department of State sees these ads as voter education, not campaign expenditures.

The Michigan Campaign Finance Act does not suggest this defective interpretation. It says that communications are campaign expenditures if they support, or oppose, a candidate by name or clear inference.

After the 2003 McCain-Feingold reforms, or Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act (BCRA), banned corporate spending in federal campaigns in the weeks immediately preceding an election, the Michigan Department of State was asked for a declaratory ruling about how BCRA would affect Michigan law. The Department said, in an interpretive statement, that it would continue its reliance on the "express advocacy" standard to determine what is, or is not, a campaign expenditure. That is, if an ad doesn't explicitly tell you who to vote for, it's not a campaign expenditure. To interpret otherwise, the Department said, would be an overbroad interpretation of State law.

Nine years after that interpretive statement, a lot has changed in U.S. Supreme Court campaign finance jurisprudence. And so should the Department of State's interpretation of our law.

Federal Election Commission v. Wisconsin Right to Life (2007) liberated corporations from the BCRA prohibition against spending in the immediate run-up to elections. In that opinion the United States Supreme Court said it was constitutionally permissible for corporations to buy ads, as long as they weren't express advocacy, or its functional equivalent. In so doing, the Court also gave us a working definition of what authentic issue advocacy is: The attempt to engage viewers to contact a public official who can act on a matter of policy. Wisconsin Right to Life's counsel, James Bopp, said that issue advocacy is "grassroots lobbying."

This leads to a real problem for the notion of issue ads in judicial campaigns. In Michigan the lobbying law does not include judges as lobbyable officials. You do your advocacy with judges in the courtroom, not over the airwaves. Therefore, since coyly worded messages about judges that don't say, "vote," are not authentic issue advocacy, they are the functional equivalent of express advocacy and they should be fully disclosed.

Caperton v. Massey Coal Company (2009) creates another major problem for the absurd notion that attack ads about judges can be issue advocacy. Caperton established that it is impermissible for a judge to hear a case involving his, or her, major campaign donor. To participate would deprive the donor's opponent in litigation of their due process right to an impartial court hearing. But how can a litigant know to make a warranted recusal motion if the sources of campaign support are not reported? We are blithely accepting an intolerable compromise of transparent impartial justice because of an anachronistic interpretation of our campaign finance law – a total misapplication of the concept of issue advocacy.

Judicial campaigns are not the only instances where the idea of issue advocacy is misused. For example, in the 2010 gubernatorial campaign the Michigan

Democratic State Central Committee spent more than $4 million for TV ads that accused Republican candidate Rick Snyder of shipping jobs to China. How could that be issue advocacy? Snyder wasn't a public official who could act on a matter of policy. At that time, he was a private citizen. His conduct of his business at Gateway Computer may have been relevant to potential voters who were assessing his suitability to hold office, but he was not in a position to act on a matter of public policy. The ads were the functional equivalent of express advocacy – an attempt to define his suitability to hold office.

Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission (2010) liberated corporations to advocate explicitly for, or against, candidates for public office. It also indicated a strong preference for disclosure of the money behind political advertisements. The Opinion of the Court said, "The First Amendment protects political speech; and disclosure permits citizens and shareholders to react to the speech of corporate entities in a proper way. This transparency enables the electorate to make informed decisions and give proper weight to different speakers and messages."

The Michigan Department of State's interpretation of the Michigan Campaign Finance Act does not make sense. There are no issue ads about judges, or candidates who are not officeholders. An interpretation that thwarts impartial justice and citizens' ability to understand free speech in a proper way cannot be allowed to stand. The Department is aiding and abetting a massive deception against the citizens of Michigan. It is time to revisit the law and interpret it in accordance with 21st Century jurisprudence – and in accordance with citizens' rights to know who is paying for campaign messages.
